LONDON, June 27

Extract of a Letter from Moſcow, dated June 10.

'WE were ſcarce recover'd from the terror and conſternation which the fire of the 23d of May occaſioned, when a fire broke out again on the 3d inſtant, near the Imperial caſtle of Kremelin, and burnt with great violence till the following evening; in which time it conſumed upwards of 13,000 houſes, beſides a great number of churches, convents, &c. The 6th inſtant another fire broke out in the centre of the city, and it is computed that near two thirds of the city are burnt down. It is certain that all the moſt conſiderable families of the Empire have received great damage by it, and the loſs of the admiral prince de Galliczin alone is eſtimated at above 150,000 rubles. The empreſs's fine ſtables are entirely conſumed, and likewiſe the great manufactury of ſail cloth, belonging to the Sieur John Tameſz, together with all the work-houſes, mills, and other appurtenances; and notwithſtanding the uſe that was made of engines of the Dutch faſhion, the flames could not be ſtopt for a conſiderable time. The dwelling houſe of the Sieur Tameſz being a ſtone building, was preſerved, all but the roof. The cauſe of this dreadful diſaſter has been found to be owing to ſome wicked incendiaries, who ſet fire to different parts of the city, on purpoſe to plunder the inhabitants during their diſtreſs. Some of them were taken in the very fact upon the hotel of the prince de Repnin, and others have ſince been detected, who, it is hoped, will meet with their juſt puniſhment.

'Several of the courtiers have endeavoured to prevail with the empreſs to lay aſide her intended journey to this city, leſt the diſmal ſight ſhould have too great an effect upon her; but we hear that her Imperial majeſty is determined that nothing ſhall alter her reſolution of coming here, and that not long ago ſhe declared at table, "that the more her ſubjects of Moſcow were in diſtreſs, the ſooner ſhe would go to comfort and relieve them."

'Among other deſtructions made by the fire, beſides what are above-mention'd, the grand Imperial laboratory was reduced to the ground, and all the extenſive buildings belonging to it. This is a very wiſe eſtabliſhment, for from hence medicines are diſtributed all over the empire, under the direction of the court, which takes care to have them prepared by able phyſicians and chemiſts, in order to fruſtrate the impoſitions of mountebanks and idle pretenders.'

Madrid, July 4. The king has at laſt reſolved to open trade again with the city of Hamburgh: The Syndic Keleker has ſigned a convention on this ſubject with the Marqueſs de la Enſenada, and to-morrow orders will be ſent down in conſequence to all the ſea ports of this kingdom.

Letters from Cadiz take notice, that ſince the abrogation of the Aſſiento contract, all the Spaniſh Colonies in America are ſupplied with Negroes by the French.

The queen dowager has purchaſed a ſpot of ground between St. Ildefonſo and Segovia, to build a palace thereon, which will coſt 24 millions of reals.

Paris, July 22. The 16th inſtant the Sieur de Liſle, mathematical profeſſor at the royal college, and veteran aſſociate of the royal academy of ſciences, and the Sieur Buache, of the ſame academy, had the honour to preſent to the King a chart of the new diſcoveries which the Sieur de Liſle has made northward of the ſouth ſea. This map fills up all the ſpace, that had been hitherto unknown, between north America and the eaſtern extremity of Aſia, and is the fruit of this academician's ſtudies and inquiries during his long reſidence in Ruſſia, and ſince his return to France. The attention which his majeſty was pleaſed to give to M. de Liſle, who explained to him all the new improvements in his map, ought to be taken as a proof of his merit: And indeed it may be ranked in the number of the moſt important geographical works that have appeared theſe many years paſt, whether we conſider the great extent of ſea and land which it exhibits, and which we were ignorant of, or whether we regard the conſequence of theſe new diſcoveries for a ſhorter paſſage from Europe to the Eaſt Indies.

The Sieur Buache alſo preſented a chart to the king, ſhewing all the courſes hitherto held in ſailing round the world; whereby one ſees at a ſingle glance, how much ſhorter are the new courſes deſcribed in M. de Liſle's map.

Vienna, July 12. By an edict publiſhed within theſe few days all ſubjects of her Imperial majeſty, whatever their rank or condition may be, are forbid under ſevere penalties to remove out of her dominions, whether it be to reſide abroad or engage in the ſervice of other powers, without a formal licenſe from the government.—Where all ſubjects are well uſed, ſuch orders are needleſs.

Bruſſels, July 20. Among other matters diſcuſſed in the conferences held here, it has been propoſed to find a fund for defraying the expence of re fortifying Tournay, Menin, Ypres, Furnes and Namur.

London, July 17. It is reported that a third perſon in a conſiderable place is diſcharged from his employment, and rendered incapable of ſerving in any office under the government during his majeſty's pleaſure.

Yeſterday morning one of the tranſports in the river fell down to Woolwich in order to take on board her ſtores, &c. which are ſaid to be going for Georgia.

By the laſt Holland mail there is advice, that the French commodore, M. du Reveſt, continued at anchor before Tripoli, waiting for the ſquadron from Toulon under the command of M. de Villarzel, with whom he was to ſail, and act in concert, on a ſecret expedition.

London, July 20. By letters from Ratiſbon we find that the evangelic body have publiſhed a memorial delivered to them in the beginning of laſt month by the proteſtants of Carinthia, containing a particular account of all the hardſhips and perſecutions they endure on the ſcore of their religion: In which memorial they ſet forth, that as they cannot in conſcience conform to the roman church, they only beg leave to forſake their country and their habitations, and to ſeek where they may have liberty to exerciſe their religion; but this juſt requeſt the court of Vienna will not grant them——Every what as humane and charitable in this reſpect as the French government: But they are our good allies; without them the B—il—ce of P——r and L—b— ies of E—pe cannot be maintained; therefore proteſtant ſtateſman muſt wink at this, though they might command any terms, only by threatening to drop ſuch a favourite point as the El—n of a K—g of the K———.

According to advices from Stockholm, the ſteeple of the church of Marieſtadt in Weſtragothia with the roof of the ſaid church, and a granary adjacent, were deſtroyed by lightning the 7th inſtant, N. S. in the night. And on the 3d a fire broke out in a ſilverſmith's houſe at Carlſtadt in Wermeland, which ſpread ſo rapidly, that in the ſpace of ten hours the whole town was reduced to aſhes, except the church, the great warehouſe for copper, iron, and other metals, and eighteen houſes of no great note.

London, July 22. The ſucceſs of our Adventurers in the whale-fiſhing this ſeaſon, has been ſo great, that we are inform'd ſeveral conſiderable merchants are determin'd to uſe their utmoſt endeavours to puſh it vigorouſly, and even as far as it can be carried. The ſame laudable diſpoſition appears with reſpect to other new branches of commerce, and the improvement of our colonies, in the manner they were originally ſettled and advanced, by the care and at the riſque of public ſpirited perſons, in their mother country. It is moſt evident, therefore, that a little attention and encouragement, is all that is neceſſary to light up ſuch a flame of real and active patriotiſm, as may cheriſh this, and dazzle the eyes of all our rival and envious neighbour nations.

According to ſome advices from Warſaw, the weather is exceſſive hot in divers parts of Poland, which occaſions many diſeaſes, beſides the plague of the Locuſts, which make great havock in Poſnania, Volhinia and other palatinates.

Letters from Peterſburg of the 7th inſtant, N. S. adviſe, that they have lately had ſeveral fires in that city, but of not great conſequence: and the better to guard againſt the effects of ſuch accidents, the government has ordered parties of ſoldiers to patrole about the ſtreets in the night; every quarter of the town is ordered to keep an engine or pump, and all houſekeepers are charged to have four barrels, full of water at the door, and on the houſe top. By the ſame letters we are informed of an inſurrection of the peaſants of ſome villages near Moſcow, on divers frivolous or ill grounded pretexts; upon which the government had been obliged to march ſeveral regiments that way, at whoſe approach the Peaſants returned to their duty.
